

This piece reflects the call of Psalm 23:1-3 to let go of what we were never meant to hold.

The open hand turns toward light, releasing the illusion for control and the weight we were never meant to carry.

*The Shepherd knows the way to peace,
to the stream of living water where our souls are nourished, restored, and made whole.*

*When we finally loosen our grip
and open our achy hands,
we find the grace to truly follow.*

To let go is to allow Love to lead and to dwell in the quiet abundance of God's tender care.
